Welcome to the 47th Annual Meeting of the Society for Cross-Cultural Research

February 21 – 24, 2018
D Hotel and Casino
Downtown Las Vegas, NV
The Society for Cross-Cultural Research was initially planned by several founding members during the annual meeting of the American Anthropological Association in November 1971, with the first meeting convened in February 1972. Since its founding, SCCR has hosted annual conferences that provide an ideal forum for sharing and discussing new ideas, establishing and maintaining professional and personal relationships, and building collaborations with national and international colleagues.

Over the years, it has been inspiring to watch an increasing number of graduate students from various disciplines and all around the world participate and develop networks at SCCR conferences and pursue careers in fields that encourage cross-cultural research. We are hopeful that this year’s conference, like all of the past conferences, will offer abundant opportunities to learn, dialogue, and network with passionate and creative scholars.

We would like to acknowledge those who assisted with the planning and organization of this year’s meeting. Thank you to the University of Nevada, Las Vegas and the Department of Anthropology for their assistance and logistical support. Thank you to the Program Committee Members: Aileen Garcia, Sahitya Maiya, Madison Memmott-Elison, Irene Padasas, and Sarah Taylor.

Welcome to the 47th annual conference for the Society for Cross-Cultural Research. We are delighted to welcome you to Las Vegas, NV!

Against Developmentality: Decolonial Approaches to Human Development

Thursday, February 22, 2018 at 9:00AM

Standard constructions of development typically emphasize economic growth and modern progress as paths to human welfare. Resonating with these growth-oriented approaches to economic development, hegemonic perspectives of human development have articulated growth-oriented approaches that promote self-exploration, self-expansion, and the pursuit of personal fulfillment. Informed by cross-cultural research on relationality, my work takes decolonial critiques of growth ideology in development studies and extends them to growth-oriented ways of thinking and being (or developmentality) that inform the study and practice of human development. From this perspective, the widespread adoption of growth-oriented developmentality as global standard does not reflect the natural superiority of this model; instead, it reflects the basis of scientific imagination in neoliberal models of “modern” selfhood that are an enduring product of colonial violence. Likewise, the widespread adoption of growth-oriented developmentality in health and welfare policy regimes is not politically neutral; instead, it reproduces domination by legitimizing pursuit of narrow individual fulfillment at the expense of sustainable well-being for broader humanity. The decolonial potential of cross-cultural research is to provide an epistemic foundation from which to interrogate implications of growth ideology for human development and to illuminate sustainable models of being as a base for public health and social welfare policy.

Sex Differences in Mobility and Wayfinding: Cross-Cultural Perspectives

Thursday, February 22, 2018 at 5:00PM

Sex differences in range size and navigation are widely reported, with males traveling farther than females, being less spatially anxious, and, in many studies, navigating more effectively. We want to know why males range farther, and what this might tell us about sex differences in wayfinding and spatial confidence. Proposed evolutionary explanations have suggested that males gain mating benefits from large ranges while females incur greater fitness costs from such travel due to parenting constraints, and that spatial abilities and strategies reflects these differences. We find some support for these hypotheses, but cross-cultural data from the Tsimane, Twe, Maya, and Faroe Islands suggests that their importance varies with both mating patterns and habitat. Our work in Utah also indicates that sex differences in risk preference mediate the sex difference in mobility, which in turn affects navigational style and confidence.

Learning to Dance to Your Own Tune: The Role of Child Development in Human Musicality
Wednesday, February 21, 2018 at 5:00PM

Music is often described as universal and uniquely human, yet musical structures and behaviors exhibit tremendous cultural diversity and variability. As is the case for language, this diversity poses a challenge to human infants and children, who must acquire knowledge and skills that are specific to their local sociocultural environment without instruction and within a relatively short window of time. Rhythm is currently a topic of great interest, given its role in some of the most ubiquitous and socially significant musical behaviors such as dancing and group music making, and also because of its relevance for language processing. In this talk I will review evidence for constraints on musical rhythm abilities, such as capacities observed across cultures or that emerge very early in child development. I will also review recent and mounting research demonstrating striking cross-cultural differences in rhythm perception and production among adults. I will highlight recent findings from our lab and others suggesting that behaviors such as dancing to music involve a host of cognitive and perceptual abilities that appear to develop quite gradually over the course of childhood. I will discuss the importance of considering childhood acquisition and enculturation processes in scientific accounts of human musicality.

_In Search of Justice: Applying Social Science Data to Indigenous Peoples’ Rights in Southern Africa_

Friday, February 23, 2018 at 5:00PM

Intensive social science research work has been carried out among the Kalahari San of southern Africa since 1950. Detailed anthropological and interdisciplinary information has been obtained on the San social organization, demography, subsistence, mobility and settlement patterns, land use, nutrition, sharing and reciprocity, and belief systems, as well as on the impacts of social, economic, environmental, and political change. Development and human rights-related work began among the San in Botswana in the mid-1970s, in Namibia in the early 1980s, in South Africa in the 1990s, and in Zimbabwe in 2010. This work drew heavily on the findings of the various researchers who had worked in southern Africa. Issues addressed included rights to land, natural resources including wild animals, plants, and water, intellectual and cultural property, as well as the right to development, political participation, health and the right to Free, Prior, and informed Consent (FPIC) concerning projects and initiatives that may affect indigenous people. The discussion will focus on how social and natural science data were applied to indigenous people’s rights issues in southern Africa, drawing on examples from five countries: Botswana, Lesotho, Namibia, South Africa, and Zimbabwe. An effort is made to show how important cross-cultural and diachronic data are in the development of arguments for human rights oriented policies and programs.

Children as Helpers: Evidence for a Universal Stage in Human Life History

Friday, February 23, 2018 at 9:00AM

The goal of this paper is to review and combine two, often contradictory, bodies of research. These include recent lab research with western preschoolers on the topic of pro-sociality—helping behavior, in particular. The second area of research consists of ethnographic material documenting children as helpers. The two streams of research are remarkably complementary and will be the basis for a claim that, if given the chance, all children from toddlerhood volunteer their assistance to others, especially those who're working. Furthermore, drawing largely on ethnographic cases, I will put forth a set of arguments that identify the fitness benefits to the child as well as to kin who're likely the beneficiaries of the child's helping behavior. Lastly, I will argue that by around five to six, children lose several of the attributes that identify them as "helpers" as they become "workers"—hence delimiting the helper stage.
Conversation Hour: Coming Out in Communities of Color: Challenges and Opportunities

Chairs: Gregory Canillas and Jennifer Metz
Thursday, February 22, 2018
3:15PM – 4:45PM

The conversation hour seeks to explore issues related to coming out in communities of color. LGBTQ of color often have difficulty coming out because they remain negatively affected by community and cultural standards, as well as general societal stereotypes of LGBTQ individuals. For those persons raised in religious families, coming out may offer more challenges, including reconciling sexual orientation with religious/spiritual beliefs. For this reason, many LGBT of color find it easier to remain closeted. LGBTQ individuals remain at greater risk for suicide attempts, depressive disorders, substance abuse and HIV/STDs. They are more than eight times as likely to attempt suicide; six times as likely to report high levels of clinical depression; three times as likely to use illicit/illegal drugs; and three times as likely to be at high risk for sexually transmitted diseases and HIV. The conversation hour will begin by briefly reviewing current literature on the coming out process in communities of color. Facilitators will briefly highlight identity models related to coming out, risk and protective factors, and the impact of religion, culture and community to this process. Facilitators will briefly highlight one denomination’s struggle with LGBTQ inclusion and highlight possible strategies to help LGBTQ of color to develop a more healthy, integrated LGBTQ identity. Presenters will highlight opportunities and challenges experienced and will provide prompts to facilitate informal discussion with colleagues about these opportunities and challenges.

NOTE: This conversation hour will be approximately one hour in length and does not require pre-registration to attend.

Conversation Hour: Exploring Extension: Non-Traditional Careers in Academia

Chairs: Car Mun Kok, Deepa Srivastava, and Maria de Guzman
Friday, February 23, 2018
10:15AM – 11:45AM

Cooperative Extension has been around for over a 100 years but is still often times called “the best kept secret.” The Cooperative Extension System (CES) serves to translate research into practical and actionable knowledge to communities to improve the lives of people. The integration of research, extension and outreach, and university and public service is vital to this system. CES is represented in all land-grant universities around the country and is a viable but often little known career path. In fact, there are numerous tenure- and non-tenure academic positions at universities and county offices that are available for those who are interested in pursuing careers in applied research. In this conversation hour, we will provide an overview of the history and purpose of Cooperative Extension, share the different models of Extension within different university systems, and explore the different academic jobs within Cooperative Extension.

NOTE: This conversation hour will be approximately one hour in length and does not require pre-registration to attend.
Conversation Hour: Women and Cross-Cultural Research – Where We’ve Been and Where We Are

Chairs: Carrie Brown and Brien Ashdown
Friday, February 23, 2018
3:15PM – 4:45PM

In this conversation hour, we bring together six women who are prominent cross-cultural researchers and leaders of SCCR. This conversation hour will provide a space for an in-depth and informal dialogue with the audience. As co-chairs, we will pose questions to the women, focusing on their research and the challenges they have faced as women in the field, as well as their triumphs. The audience will also have the opportunity to ask the panel questions about their experiences and to seek advice for current issues.

Participants:
Judith Gibbons, Saint Louis University
Debbie Best, Wake Forest University
Alice Schlegel, University of Arizona
Hemalatha Ganapathy-Coleman, University of Toronto Mississauga
Jill Brown, Creighton University
Bonnie Hewlett, Washington State University

NOTE: This conversation hour will be approximately one hour in length and does not require pre-registration to attend.

Workshop: Exploring Cultural Variation Using eHRAF World Cultures

Presenter: Carol Ember, President, Human Relations Area Files
Saturday, February 24, 2018
10:15AM – 11:45AM

eHRAF World Cultures was designed to facilitate cross-cultural comparisons by providing finely subject-indexed ethnographic information about the cultures of the world. With over 300 cultures included, you can readily compare similar topics across cultures. In this workshop, you will learn the fundamentals of using eHRAF World Cultures in the context of coding a few variables about child socialization. Specifically, we will examining variation in the degree to which parents use corporal punishment. Pointers will be given for learning more about designing and conducting a cross-cultural study.

NOTE: This workshop will be 1.5 hours long and does not require pre-registration to attend.

JACKSONVILLE

Join us next year for the 48th Annual Meeting of The Society for Cross-Cultural Research

FEBRUARY 13-16, 2019

Omni Jacksonville Hotel 245 Water Street, Jacksonville, Florida 32202
SCCR Membership

To join the Society for Cross-Cultural Research, please visit our website at www.sccr.org and submit the online application form and pay your dues online or print and fill out a form and mail it to the Treasurer along with your dues payment.

Membership in SCCR begins after your payment has been received, and will continue for one or two years, depending on the selection you make. After becoming an SCCR member, you will begin receiving the current issues of Cross-Cultural Research. Back issues of the journal are available online only.

There are three categories of membership in SCCR. Regular, Student, and Retired members receive Cross-Cultural Research, the Newsletter, 20% publisher discounts from Sage Publications and Information Age Publishing, reduced meeting registration rates, and voting privileges. Joint members share one copy of CCR. You may choose an alternate two-year dues payment option at a reduced rate.

SCCR ANNUAL AWARDS

SCCR Leigh Minturn Memorial Award
for Early Career Cross-Cultural Research

A. Leigh Minturn (1928 – 1999) was Professor Emerita of Social Psychology at the University of Colorado, and a past president of SCCR. The obituary of Dr. Minturn written by William Lambert (following her untimely death in the Egypt Air plane crash tragedy) described her as “…a strong presence, bordering on the aristocratic, knitting through a scientific meeting and facing questions with characteristic vigor and courage, drawing upon immense knowledge from cross-cultural lore and generalizations, to systematic, well-planned research findings and the growing cross-cultural data from experiments.” She was a long-term leader of SCCR and bequeathed an endowment to SCCR that will make possible web site renovation and many other growth initiatives. Leigh Minturn mentored many cross-cultural scholars and will have a permanent impact on SCCR. This award honors her memory and legacy.

SCCR John & Beatrice Whiting Memorial Award for Outstanding Student in Cross-Cultural Studies

John Wesley Mayhew Whiting (1908 – 1999) was Professor of Social Anthropology Emeritus at Harvard University. Beatrice Blyth Whiting (1914 – 2003) was Professor Emerita of Education at the Harvard Graduate School of Education. Both were major figures in the creation of SCCR (link here to article about SCCR’s founding) and Beatrice Whiting was SCCR’s first president. Both were pioneers in the areas of psychological anthropology and studies in child development. Their marriage of over 60 years and legendary research partnership inspires all academic couples, and their mentoring of generations of internationally-minded students and researchers left a permanent imprint on our field. This annual award respectfully honors their legacy and memory.
